

Northern Ireland is the best place to start and grow a business

More young businesses reach £1m in sales in Northern Ireland than anywhere else in the UK

 356   0  419  775  Email

9.7pc of start-ups in Belfast make it to the £1m turnover mark within their first three years

One of the greatest artists to have ever lived
Born in 1452 in the Tuscan village of Vinci, Leonardo was the epitome of the "Renaissance man"

Sponsored by
MasterCard

By Rebecca Burn-Callander, Enterprise Editor

12:01AM BST 17 Jun 2015

 Follow { 8,940 followers

 4 Comments

More small firms in Northern Ireland hit the "magic milestone" of £1m in revenues within their first three years in business than anywhere else in the UK.

Across Northern Ireland, the number of start-ups reaching a £1m turnover between 2011 and 2014 ranges from 9.3pc in the north, to 9.7pc in Belfast, to 10.8pc in the west and south regions, according to a new report from the independent research outfit, the Enterprise Research Centre (ERC).